American taxpayers are quite interested in knowing how banks have used the money that Treasury has invested under the Capital Purchase Program (CPP). To answer that question, Treasury is seeking responses that describe generally how the CPP investment has affected the operation of your business. We understand that once received, the cash associated with TARP funding is indistinguishable from other cash sources, unless the funds were segregated, and therefore it may not be feasible to identify precisely how the CPP investment was deployed or how many CPP dollars were allocated to each use. Nevertheless, we ask you to provide as much information as you can about how you have used the capital Treasury has provided, and how your uses of that capital have changed over time. Treasury will be pairing this survey with a summary of certain balance sheet and other financial data from your institution's regulatory filings, so to the extent you find it helpful to do so, please feel free to refer to your institution's quarterly call reports to illustrate your answers. This is your opportunity to speak to the taxpayers in your own words, which will be posted on our website.

What specific ways did your institution utilize CPP capital? Check all that apply and elaborate as appropriate, especially if the uses have shifted over time. Your responses should reflect actions taken over the past year (or for the portion of the year in which CPP funds were outstanding).

For the short period of time FirstMerit held TARP funds (103 days), we were able to purchase additional agency mortgage-backed securities due to the improved liquidity position resulting from the TARP funds being on deposit.

What actions were you able to avoid because of the capital infusion of CPP funds?

What actions were you able to take that you may not have taken without the capital infusion of CPP funds?

FirstMerit held $125 million in TARP capital for 103 days between January 9, 2009 and April 22, 2009, inclusive. While FirstMerit was well capitalized at the time of the TARP borrowing, we accepted the funds because we were unsure of the gravity of the economic downturn and because we were committed, as were many other banks, to assist in the stabilization of the United States economy. The TARP funds acted as an insurance policy that would, if an unforeseen economic turn for the worse had happened, allow us to continue making and servicing loans to individuals, homeowners and businesses. Before, during, and after the time FirstMerit held the TARP funds, we continued to serve customers in our communities and remained one of the best capitalized banks in our footprint and the entire industry. After holding the funds only a short time, we realized that the government funds were not needed to ensure our financial stability or our ability to continue to lend and engage in other banking activities.

Please describe any other actions that you were able to undertake with the capital infusion of CPP funds.
